Home staging is a vital step in selling a home. A staged home can sell much quicker than an un-staged home. While it can be easier to stage a house with a professional, it is something that can be done by the current owner. Staging can take some time and thought, but it does not have to cost a lot of money.

1. Pick the perfect paint color: When you go to pick paint, either go for a perfect shade of white, a color that flatters every skin tone, or go for bold in a dark shade of red or brown or even black. Ceilings painted white or cream tend to make the room feel larger. 2. Make your bathroom look like a hotel: This means a counter free of products except a couple that have pretty packaging.

Professional home stagers are particularly relevant and effective if you are selling a vacant home. It is more difficult for buyers to picture themselves living in the home if it is vacant. However, a vacant house will cost more money to stage than an occupied one since all the furnishings will need to be rented. The overall cost of hiring a stager is primarily dependant on your specific needs. Moreover, the size of the house, as well as the number of rooms you require staged, will have an ...

Lauren Liess, an interior designer and founder of the popular blog Pure Style Home, fuses her love of design and the great outdoors into all her work. In Habitat: The Field Guide to Decorating, her first book, Lauren invites readers to bring nature inside by mixing the textures of natural elements such as wood and stone with eclectic groupings of modern and quirky vintage pieces. Readers will be inspired by the unique style of these rooms, which include lovely framed botanical prints and Liess's own textile patterns inspired by wildflowers and weeds. The book is divided into three sections: Part I focuses on the fundamental elements of design, with each chapter devoted to a particular element, such as color, lighting, and furniture; Part II addresses the intangibles of designing a space, such as aesthetics and creating a mood; and Part III tackles unique room-specific challenges in every part of the house.
