Knowledge Discovery is an interdisciplinary area focusing upon methodologies for identifying valid, novel, potentially useful and meaningful patterns from data, often based on underlying large data sets. A major aspect of Knowledge Discovery is data mining, i.e. applying data analysis and discovery algorithms that produce a particular enumeration of patterns (or models) over the data.

Knowledge discovery is the process of extracting useful knowledge from data [1]. Application of criminal intelligence that is extracted from crime data is used in many ways for investigation of individual crimes, as well as criminal networks [2,3]. Skillicorn [4] states that knowledge discovery can take place in two different ways. In traditional law enforcement the role of knowledge discovery is retrospective: when a crime has been committed, an investigation gathers data in a needs-driven ...

Data mining is a process of discovering patterns in large data sets involving methods at the intersection of machine learning, statistics, and database systems. Data mining is an interdisciplinary subfield of computer science and statistics with an overall goal to extract information from a data set and transform the information into a comprehensible structure for further use. Data mining is the analysis step of the "knowledge discovery in databases" process, or KDD. Aside from the raw analysis
